HOWEY, THE BLACKSMITH
"As oft in my smithy I'm blowing my fire,
And of earth and water am making my share,
All the world like the sparks I see upward aspire,
And to drive this reflection I cannot but sigh,
Never fail, oh, to strike when the iron is hot."

In searching my heart should I find I intend
Some good to myself or another to do,
To relieve the distressed or myself to amend,
Oh! what the bright light when the purpose shall glow.

When I feel how hard on the moment I wait,
If I fail not to strike while the iron is hot,
When I feel how hard on the moment I wait,
If I fail not to strike while the iron is hot.
